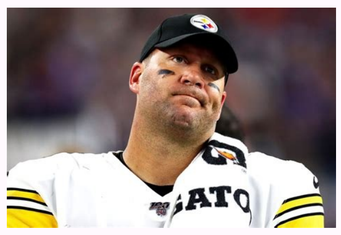
Big ben nfl injury report

I'm not robot!



Big ben injuries.

PITTSBURGH -- Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger has added a third injury to his body heading into Week 9 against the Chicago Bears. Roethlisberger has been limited in practice the last two days, initially with a hip and pectoral injury, but on Friday, was listed to have a right shoulder injury as well. The right shoulder is the throwing arm of Roethlisberger. It's also the same arm he had reconstructive surgery on his elbow in 2019. As for the rest of the Steelers' injury report, defensive tackle Cam Heyward (ankle) and kicker Chris Boswell (concussion) were full participants on Friday. Boswell appears to be almost through the concussion protocol. Tight end Eric Ebron (hamstring) was limited after missing Thursday. Offensive lineman B.J. Finney did not practice with a back injury. (Photo by Joe Sargent/Getty Images)Ben Roethlisberger's career is entering what could be the last month of regular-season games. At 39-years-old, with 18 NFL seasons under his belt, there's plenty of mileage on Big Ben's tires. On Tuesday's injury report, Roethlisberger returned to the practice field. But that isn't what caught fans attention. It was the future Hall-of-Famer's injury designation. "Roethlisberger (old) returns to practice Tuesday," Roethlisberger (old) returns to practice Tuesday ⁦⁦ NBC Sports EDGE Football (@NBCSEdgeFB) December 7, 2021">NBC Sports EDGE reported. The tweet garnered a ton of reactions from NFL fans and media alike. "damn," ESPN's Field Yates replied. "They really did it to him this time," a Steelers fan laughed. "This is, simply, a top 5 headline since the turn of the millennium," said another fan. "Damn they don't care anymore," an NFL fan replied. Two year's removed from elbow surgery, that's not what's bothering the two-time Super Bowl champ's arm. It's his shoulder. "My elbow feels great, thanks to the doctors," Big Ben told reporters on Tuesday. "It's just dealing with throwing. I wish someone could keep track, like, I've thrown a million throws in my life, so at some point your shoulder starts to wear down a little bit." Roethlisberger will try to get some life back in that arm for a key Thursday night game against the Vikings. A win could go a long way towards the Steelers staying in the playoff hunt. Rob Carr/Getty ImagesBen Roethlisberger is having a career season for the Pittsburgh Steelers, but the signal-caller has been sidelined since suffering injuries against the Kansas City Chiefs.UPDATE: Sunday, December 9 at 12:25 p.m. ET by Timothy RappAs expected. Big Ben is active and will be starting on Sunday. From FOX Sports NFL:It's Official: Ben Roethlisberger will start vs. #Chargers.— FOX SPORTS: NFL (@NFLONFOX) December 6, 2012---End of Update---UPDATE: Thursday, December 6 at 8:16 a.m. ETGreat news for Steelers fans and fantasy owners as Ben Roethlisberger (shoulder, ribs) is expected to start Sunday, according to Beaver County Times' Mike Bires. Mark it down. Ben Roethlisberger will start Sunday against the Chargers. Steelers coach Mike Tomlin wants proof that his injured quarterback is healthy enough to play for the first time Nov. 12, and he got it Wednesday. Roethlisberger, who’s recovering from a sprained right shoulder/dislocated rib injury, shared practice reps with Charlie Batch and looked good enough to impress Tomlin. 'It was a positive day for Ben,' Tomlin said. 'He threw the ball around both vertically and horizontally. I thought the ball had good velocity, particularly in a few instances. It was positive. I saw him making the necessary throws.' 'Obviously, we’ll see how his body responds to it (Thursday). But I thought (Wednesday) was a good step,' [Tomlin said].---End of Update---UPDATE: Tuesday, December 4 at 12:15 p.m. ETMike Tomlin, as expected, stated today that the plan for now is for Charlie Batch to start Sunday and that Ben Roethlisberger essentially has to prove himself in practice this week, according to NFL's Aditi Kinkhabwala.Tomlin says 'we'll see what Ben can prove to us' from a health standpoint. Says tomorrow big day for him. Until then, gameplan is for Batch— Aditi Kinkhabwala (@AKinkhabwala) December 4, 2012---End of Update---UPDATE: Tuesday, December 4 at 11:19 a.m. ETBen Roethlisberger is now expected to start Sunday, according to Pittsburgh Post-Gazette's Gerry Dulac.The Steelers expect Ben Roethlisberger to return and start against the San Diego Chargers on Sunday---End of Update---UPDATE: Tuesday, December 4 at 10:33 a.m. ETBen Roethlisberger continues to make progress as he eyes a return from devastating shoulder and rib injuries. ESPN's Ed Werder has the latest:The Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback has been working to improve his strength and range of motion as the soreness in his shoulder and chest have diminished, according to a source. Mike Tomlin and his coaching staff will determine over the course of the week whether Roethlisberger returns from a three-week absence. Roethlisberger will attempt to demonstrate to the coaching staff that he's capable of making all of the required throws, something he failed to accomplish last week. It seems practices Wednesday and Thursday will determine his readiness and then everyone in the organization will be holding their breath the first time he takes a hit.---End of Update---UPDATE: Sunday, December 2 at 12:55 p.m ET by Timothy RappBen Roethlisberger won't be playing this week, as the NFL injury report has him officially listed as "out." While that's hardly a surprise, his absence will render most of his teammates as poor fantasy plays and leaves a victory over the dreaded Baltimore Ravens a tall task.---End of Update---UPDATE: Friday, November 30 at 1:50 p.m ET by Michael CahillThe Pittsburgh Steelers have decided to exercise caution when it comes to the injury of their franchise QB. According to Mark Kaboly of the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review, Big Ben will not suit up this week.This common sense guys is spot on: Steelers officially rule out Ben Roethlisberger— Mark Kaboly (@MarkKaboly_Trib) November 30, 2012--End of Update--UPDATE: Friday, November 30 at 1:22 p.m. ET by Alex BallentineIf the Steelers are going to beat the Baltimore Ravens on Sunday, they'll have to do it without Roethlisberger at quarterback. Albert Breer of NFL Network is reporting that Roethlisberger will be held out of Sunday's game.Per source, Steelers QB Ben Roethlisberger will not play Sunday against the Ravens.— Albert Breer (@AlbertBreer) November 30, 2012This is bad news for the Steelers who are coming off of a 20-13 loss to the Cleveland Browns with Charlie Batch at quarterback.---End of Update---UPDATE: Friday, Novermber 30 at 10:45 a.m. ET by Rob GoldbergUnfortunately for Ben Roethlisberger and the Pittsburgh Steelers, things do not look good for a return to the field on Sunday. ESPN's Ed Werder tweeted the latest word from Thursday's practice:Source says Ben Roethlisberger struggled throwing in one practice period involving him yesterday and only 35 percent chance he plays Ravens— Ed Werder (@Edwerderespn) November 30, 2012Roethlisberger is as tough as they come on the football field, but it seems like the team will have to try to beat the Baltimore Ravens without its starting quarterback.---End of Update---UPDATE: Thursday, November 29 at 1:40 p.m. ETPer Mark Kaboly of Pittsburgh Tribune Review reports Roethlisberger's availability comes down to arm strength.Roethlisberger unsure if he will play. Will come down to arm strength and only arm strength. Everything else is fine.— Mark Kaboly (@MarkKaboly_Trib) November 29, 2012If Roethlisberger plays he will have extra padding around heart/rib area including Kevlar.— Mark Kaboly (@MarkKaboly_Trib) November 29, 2012UPDATE: Thursday, November 29 at 10:57 a.m. ETDiscouraging news for Steelers fans and fantasy owners as Beaver County Times' Mike Bires believes Ben Roethlisberger is unlikely to play Sunday agains the Ravens.It’s unlikely the Steelers will have their franchise quarterback Sunday in Baltimore. They will have their reigning Most Valuable Player though. With Ben Roethlisberger still rehabbing his shoulder and rib injuries, Charlie Batch expects to make his second straight start. ---End of Update---UPDATE: Tuesday, November 27 at 12:10 p.m. ET by Alex KayCoach Mike Tomlin had some positive light to shed upon Ben Roethlisberger's recovery. According to the Steelers' official Twitter feed, Big Ben was able to throw on Monday and could possibly be back under center when the Steelers take on the Ravens this coming Sunday." Ben threw the ball yesterday, he took steps, maybe toward playing this week" Coach Tomlin— Pittsburgh Steelers (@steelers) November 27, 2012We'll keep you updated as soon as we know more about the signal-caller's status.---END OF UPDATE---UPDATE: Tuesday, November 27 at 9:43 a.m. ETBen Roethlisberger (shoulder, ribs) is as questionable as they come this week, as there is a 50 percent chance he will start against the Ravens, according to ESPN's Ed Werder. I'm told that Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger is 50-50 to start Sunday against the Ravens.— Ed Werder (@Edwerderespn) November 27, 2012UPDATE: Monday, November 26 at 9:22 a.m. ETBen Roethlisberger (shoulder, ribs) is clearly getting antsy after watching his team fall to the Cleveland Browns in Week 12 and looks to be on track for Week 13. Pittsburgh Post-Gazette's Ron Cook has the latest from Big Ben:'I'm going to try,' injured quarterback Ben Roethlisberger said when asked if he thought he could play against the Ravens. 'It's killing me to watch.'---End of Update---UPDATE: Sunday, November 25 at 11:52 a.m. ETWhile things are looking good for Ben Roethlisberger to be under center for the Pittsburgh Steelers next week against the Baltimore Ravens, he has been officially ruled out of this week's matchup with the Cleveland Browns, per Nate Ulrich of the Akron Beacon Journal:#Steelers inactives: QBs Leftwich & Roethlisberger, CB Van Dyke, S Polamalu, OT Gilbert, WRs Brown & Cotchery. #Browns #NFL— Nate Ulrich

(@NateUlrichABJ) November 25, 2012With Byron Leftwich also out of Sunday's game, Charlie Batch will get the start against Cleveland in Roethlisberger's place.---End of Update---UPDATE: Sunday, November 25 at 11:20 a.m. ETGreat news for Steelers fans and fantasy owners as Ben Roethlisberger (shoulder, ribs) is making progress, according to ESPN's Chris Mortensen.Ben Roethlisberger just may be ready for the Pittsburgh Steelers' rematch with the Baltimore Ravens next Sunday. The Steelers quarterback will begin soft-tossing the football early in the week to test his range of motion and work through the pain of his rare rib and shoulder injury, according to team sources... ...doctors have determined his rib has healed enough that he doesn't risk further damage. Roethlisberger's pain tolerance and range of motion could determine whether he plays next week. ---End of Update---UPDATE: Thursday, November 22 at 2:07 p.m. ETBen Roethlisberger is expected to return to action in Week 13, according to CBS Sports' Jason La Canfora....Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger is expected back for Week 13 against Baltimore... ...Just-signed Brian Hoyer will back up Charlie Batch on Sunday for the Steelers as of now, sources said, though it is not out of the question that Roethlisberger dresses in an emergency role for the game against the Browns. Roethlisberger is making progress in his recovery from rib and shoulder injuries, sources said, and he is not in his sling as much as last week, and he remains week-to-week.---End of Update---UPDATE: Thursday, November 22 at 10:39 a.m. ETEncouraging news for Steelers fans and fantasy owners as Ben Roethlisberger has shed the sling he was previously wearing to support his injured shoulder, according to Pittsburgh Tribune-Review's Alan Robinson.Ben Roethlisberger is missing the sling he wore for a week to protect his still-healing upper chest/shoulder/rib injury. He moved his right arm normally and didn’t appear to be in significant pain, as he looked to be last week. He did not talk with reporters Wednesday. Coach Mike Tomlin expressed optimism Tuesday that his quarterback was healing quickly. There still isn’t a time frame for his recovery, partly because no other NFL player of recent vintage has had the injury.---End of Update---UPDATE: Monday, November 19 at 10:42 a.m. ETAt this point, Steelers fans and fantasy owners shouldn't expect to see Ben Roethlisberger suit up anytime soon as the team looks out for his long-term health. SI.com's Peter King has the latest:Roethlisberger has no sense when he'll be able to return. But according to Dr. Clark Fuller, the director of Thoracic Surgery at St. John's Health Center in Santa Monica, Calif., Roethlisberger has to be careful about returning too soon because of damage it can do to nerves in the right shoulder and arm, major blood vessels in the area, and, as Roethlisberger admitted last week, the aorta around the heart. 'This is not about being a tough guy,' said Fuller, who has neither examined Roethlisberger nor seen his X-rays or scans. So he made it clear he was speaking generally about the dislocation of the first rib, which is connected to the breast bone on one side and the spine on the other. A throwing motion, he said, would not allow the rib to heal, and he would not recommend it any time soon. 'Playing football with a dislocated first rib would put you at severe risk. There are many things to be concerned about, including destroying the nerves in the arm.'---End of Update---UPDATE: Sunday, November 18 at 7:45 p.m. ET by Rob GoldbergAccording to Michael Fabiano of NFL.com, Ben Roethlisberger is officially inactive for Sunday's game against the Baltimore Ravens.Ben Roethlisberger and Antonio Brown are both INACTIVE.— Michael Fabiano (@Michael_Fabiano) November 19, 2012A difficult matchup for the Steelers gets even tougher without the team's star player.---End of Update---UPDATE: Wednesday, November 14 at 1:41 p.m. ET by Tyler ConwayIn the latest of the awful news surrounding Ben Roethlisberger's ribs, the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback has said he's unsure of when he'll play again this season, according to ESPN's Adam Schefter:Steelers QB Ben Roethlisberger said he does not believe his rib injury is season ending but he is unsure when he'll play again.— Adam Schefter (@AdamSchefter) November 14, 2012With the Steelers coming into Week 11 at 6-3 and just one game behind Sunday's opponent, the Baltimore Ravens, this could be a season-crushing blow. Look for Byron Leftwich to take Roethlisberger's place in the lineup while the starter is out.---End of Update---UPDATE: Wednesday, November 14 at 1 p.m. ETPittsburgh Post-Gazette's Ed Bouchette went on to report more details surrounding Big Be's rib injury:#Steelers Ben Roethlisberger has a rare rib injury that could kill him by pressing against his aorta. Too big risk. Has to wait until heals— Ed Bouchette (@EdBouchette) November 14, 2012#Roethlisberger's rib is partially dislocated and of more concern than the shoulder. Don't look for him to play in awhile. #Steelers— Ed Bouchette (@EdBouchette) November 14, 2012---End of Update---UPDATE: Wednesday, November 14 at 10:35 a.m. ETBen Roethlisberger is dealing with a troublesome rib injury in addition to his shoulder injury, according to ESPN's Adam Schefter. While focus is on Ben Roethlisberger's shoulder, greater concern is his injured rib. Roethlisberger's rib injury is rare and dangerous.— Adam Schefter (@AdamSchefter) November 14, 2012---End of Update---UPDATE: Wednesday, November 14 at 9:52 a.m. ETByron Leftwich will start in Ben Roethlisberger's place this Sunday against the Ravens, according to Steelers.com's Teresa Varley. Quarterback Byron Leftwich will start Sunday night against the Baltimore Ravens at Heinz Field, replacing injured Ben Roethlisberger.---End of Update---UPDATE: Wednesday, November 14 at 8:28 a.m. ETBen Roethlisberger (shoulder) won't play in Week 11, according to FOX Sports' Jay Glazer.Ben Roethlisberger is out this week and Byron Leftwich will get the start. Steelers are not taking any chances w Ben, deciding to sit him— Jay Glazer (@JayGlazer) November 14, 2012---End of Update---UPDATE: Tuesday, November 13 at 1:10 p.m. ETESPN's Ed Werder nearly mirrored Ed Bouchette's earlier details around Roethlisberger's injury. He tweeted:Preliminary indication is Big Ben likely suffered a sprained SC joint as coach Mike Tomlin stated and also rib injury on the same play.— Ed Werder (@Edwerderespn) November 13, 2012---End of Update---UPDATE: Tuesday, November 13 at 12:07 p.m. ETMike Tomlin has confirmed Ben Roethlisberger's shoulder injury and says the Steelers' QB is questionable for this week's game against the Ravens, according to Pittsburgh Post-Gazette's Ed Bouchette.#Steelers Mike Tomlin: Ben shoulder sprain. SC sprain. that's all info now. makes him questionable this week— Ed Bouchette (@EdBouchette) November 13, 2012ESPN's Josina Anderson went on to report that the Steelers are expected to proceed with Byron Leftwich this week:On Roethlisberger's status, Steelers source says staff was told: "Proceed with Byron. It doesn't look like you're going to have Ben this week. We're looking at next week as a possibility as of right now."Source added the situation remains fluid.
